In short, when you don't desire God., it's because He is no longer the object of your affection. Want to desire God? Get back to the heart of worship. Get back to that place where you craved Him when you first got saved. Get back to that place of worship. Get RID of anything or anyone that is hindering you. THEN, stay there. Renew your mind.

"When I No Longer Desire God" - Heather Lindsey

During the times when you feel nothing toward God, it helps to read His Word to remember how He feels about you. Dig into Scripture as much as possible while dealing with these feelings of disinterest. God's Word is truly "a lamp to my feet and a light for my path" (Psalm 119:105). Try reading a psalm a day.

What can I do when I don't feel any love for God ...

How to Develop a Desire for the Word of God. I think the two best things you can do to develop a desire for the Word of God are to pray and to start reading the Bible! Pray. Admit to God what's in your heart. If you hate reading the Bible, tell Him so! If you don't even desire to have a desire to read the Scriptures, tell Him that too! God can handle it, and He won't be surprised—He already knows what is in your heart.

When I Don't Desire God - LifeWay

As many people know, John Piper's flagship book is Desiring God: Meditations of a Christian Hedonist. That is a fabulous book, but I have found that, like many others, I don't need convincing that I should desire God as the greatest good. Instead, I find in myself that as much as I know this is true, I don't always feel it.
